IN RE:

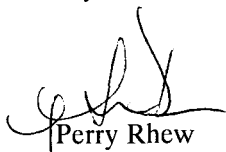

APPLICATION: Application for Certificate of Citizenship under Section 322 of the Immigration and Nationality Act; 8 U.S.C. §1433 (2000).

ON BEHALF OF APPLICANT:

INSTRUCTIONS:

This is the decision of the Administrative Appeals Office in your case. All documents have been returned to the office that originally decided your case. Any further inquiry must be made to that office.

If you believe the law was inappropriately applied or you have additional information that you wish to have considered, you may file a motion to reconsider or a motion to reopen. Please refer to 8 C.F.R. § 103.5 for the specific requirements. All motions must be submitted to the office that originally decided your case by filing a Form I-290B, Notice of Appeal or Motion, with a fee of $585. Any motion must be filed within 30 days of the decision that the motion seeks to reconsider or reopen, as required by 8 C.F.R. § 103.5(a)(1)(i).

Perry Rhew
Chief, Administrative Appeals Office

DISCUSSION: The application was denied by the Field Office Director, Harlingen, Texas, and is now before the Administrative Appeals Office (AAO) on appeal. The appeal will be dismissed.

The record reflects that the applicant was born on March 13, 1991 in Mexico. The applicant's father, [REDACTED], is a U.S. citizen. The record contains a copy of his U.S. passport, but his certificate of naturalization is not in the record. The applicant's parents were married in Texas in 1990. The applicant's eighteenth birthday was on March 13, 2009. The applicant seeks a certificate of citizenship claiming that she derived U.S. citizenship through her father pursuant to section 322 of the Immigration and Nationality Act (the Act), 8 U.S.C. § 1433 (2000).

Upon finding that the applicant had already reached the age of 18, the field office director denied her application. On appeal, the applicant maintains that she timely applied for a certificate of citizenship and that the delay in processing her citizenship application should not prevent her from obtaining it. See Applicant's Appeal Brief. Counsel claims, inter alia, that section 322 of the Act does not require that the certificate of citizenship be issued prior to the applicant's eighteenth birthday. Id.

Section 322 of the Act was amended by the Child Citizenship Act of 2000 (CCA), Pub. L. No. 106-395, 114 Stat. 1631 (Oct. 30, 2000), and took effect on February 27, 2001. CCA § 104. The CCA benefits all persons who had not yet reached their eighteenth birthdays as of February 27, 2001. See Matter of Rodriguez-Tejedor, 23 I&N Dec. 153 (BIA 2001). Because the applicant was under 18 years old on February 27, 2001, she meets the age requirement for benefits under the CCA.

Section 322 of the Act, 8 U.S.C. § 1433, provides that:

(a) A parent who is a citizen of the United States may apply for naturalization on behalf of a child born outside of the United States who has not acquired citizenship automatically under section 320. The Attorney General shall issue a certificate of citizenship to such applicant upon proof, to the satisfaction of the Attorney General, that the following conditions have been fulfilled:

(1) At least one parent is a citizen of the United States, whether by birth or naturalization.

(2) The United States citizen parent--

(A) has been physically present in the United States or its outlying possessions for a period or periods totaling not less than five years, at least two of which were after attaining the age of fourteen years; or

(B) has a citizen parent who has been physically present in the United States or its outlying possessions for a period or periods totaling not less than five years, at least two of which were after attaining the age of fourteen years.

(3) The child is under the age of eighteen years.

(4) The child is residing outside of the United States in the legal and physical custody of the applicant [citizen parent] (or, if the citizen parent is deceased, an individual who does not object to the application).

(5) The child is temporarily present in the United States pursuant to a lawful admission, and is maintaining such lawful status.

(b) Upon approval of the application (which may be filed from abroad) and, except as provided in the last sentence of section 337(a), upon taking and subscribing before an officer of the Service within the United States to the oath of allegiance required by this Act of an applicant for naturalization, the child shall become a citizen of the United States and shall be furnished by the Attorney General with a certificate of citizenship.

(c) Subsections (a) and (b) shall apply to a child adopted by a United States citizen parent if the child satisfies the requirements applicable to adopted children under section 101(b)(1).

The record in this case reflects that the applicant reached the age of 18 on March 13, 2009. Sections 322(a)(3) and (b) of the Act, and the regulation at 8 C.F.R. §322.2(a)(3), require that a certificate of citizenship application be filed, adjudicated, and approved with the oath of allegiance administered before the child's eighteenth birthday. The AAO therefore finds that the applicant is ineligible for citizenship under the cited provision because she is already 18.

The applicant, through counsel, maintains that she was eligible for a certificate of citizenship on the day she filed her application. See Applicant's Appeal Brief. She further claims that an unnecessary investigation delayed the adjudication of her application and, in any event, the statute does not require that her application be adjudicated prior to her eighteenth birthday. Id. Contrary to the applicant's claims, however, the statute specifically requires the adjudication and approval of the application, as well as taking of the oath of citizenship, prior to an applicant's eighteenth birthday.¹

¹ The applicant notes that her sister's application for a certificate has been approved. The AAO notes that the applicant's sister, who was born on July 5, 1992, is not yet 18 years old. The applicant's sister was under the age of 18 when her application was approved.

The applicant appears to be seeking to gain U.S. citizenship by application of the doctrine of equitable estoppel. The AAO notes first that it is without authority to apply the doctrine of equitable estoppel in this or any other case. The AAO, like the Board of Immigration Appeals, is "without authority to apply the doctrine of equitable estoppel against the Service so as to preclude it from undertaking a lawful course of action that it is empowered to pursue by statute and regulation." Matter of Hernandez-Puente, 20 I&N Dec. 335, 338 (BIA 1991). The jurisdiction of the AAO is limited to that authority specifically granted through the regulations at Volume 8 of the Code of Federal Regulations (8 C.F.R.) section 103.1(f)(3)(iii) (as in effect on Feb. 28, 2003) and subsequent amendments.

The requirements for citizenship, as set forth in the Act, are statutorily mandated by Congress, and that USCIS lacks statutory authority to issue a certificate of citizenship when an applicant fails to meet the relevant statutory provisions set forth in the Act. A person may only obtain citizenship in strict compliance with the statutory requirements imposed by Congress. INS v. Pangilinan, 486 U.S. 875, 885 (1988). Even courts may not use their equitable powers to grant citizenship, and any doubts concerning citizenship are to be resolved in favor of the United States. Id. at 883-84; see also United States v. Manzi, 276 U.S. 463, 467 (1928) (stating that "citizenship is a high privilege, and when doubts exist concerning a grant of it ... they should be resolved in favor of the United States and against the claimant"). Moreover, "it has been universally accepted that the burden is on the alien applicant to show his eligibility for citizenship in every respect." Berenyi v. District Director, INS, 385 U.S. 630, 637 (1967).

The applicant is statutorily ineligible for U.S. citizenship under sections 322(a)(3) and (b) of the Act because she is over the age of 18. Her appeal will therefore be dismissed.

ORDER: The appeal is dismissed.
